Our vision

Australia Post has a strong and important voice in the community in support of the positive role workplaces can play in creating care and connection. Through the application of evidence-based, risk-focused best practice, Australia Post seeks to be a leader in creating psychologically sustainable and mentally healthy workplaces. We lead our team, and engage with our partners and the community, to positively influence psychological safety and wellbeing.

Our history

In 2016/17 we advanced the implementation of an enterprise foundation mental health strategy. A strong focus on protective factors, stigma reduction and education saw a change in the way we thought and spoke about mental health. With improved awareness and work to combat stigma, and significant investment in leadership capability, a corresponding increased EAP utilisation suggested our people were more comfortable reaching out early for support.

Taking a psychosocial risk approach to key roles in Sales, Retail, Deliveries and Customer Services led to the development of the Psychological Safety Working Group framework as a holistic, enterprise-wide approach with consistent, but tailorable implementation across business units. Business Unit Psychological Safety Working Groups have evolved to become self-sustaining, effective mechanisms for identifying and controlling psychosocial exposures to ensure our people are safe and well at work.

Today, our foundational programs provide our team members with the skills, information, and resources to look after each other's and their own mental health and wellbeing. Collaborating with leading, credible organisations has enabled us to deepen our knowledge and contribute to positive, systematic change.
